Judge Frees Protesters, Blasts Police for Bringing 'Dark Days'

by Gil Ronen

(IsraelINN.com) Judge Nechama Netzer of the Kiryat Gat Magistrates' Court ordered the immediate release Sunday of seven activists arrested by police at a rally in Sderot earlier in the day. The judge had exceedingly sharp criticism for the police's actions.

"The use of the power of government and the authority to arrest in order to prevent this right of expression, besides being an act of censorship, shows us that very dark days are upon the State of Israel," she determined.

Sderot police detained more than 20 activists Sunday morning, including children, who participated in a rally at Sderot. The activists were among some 400 people who took part in the rally, and were planning to participate in a protest march from Sderot to Gaza. However, dozens of police, including mounted police and Yasam units, blocked the activists' way and prevented the march from taking place. Despite the detentions, some activists were able to reach the edge of Gaza, opposite the remains of Jewish communities that were uprooted in the Disengagement of 2005...
